Choosing a community college just makes good sense. Dollar for dollar, there is no comparison. With tuition and fees considerably less expensive than the university's, community colleges save parents considerable amounts of money. Coupled with an extra dose of personal attention and traditional collegiate atmosphere, community colleges fit the bill for students and parents alike.

Considering that, Northeast Mississippi Community College is a smart choice any way you look at it. Our students, regardless of age, continually rank the quality of their education at Northeast as superior. Offering associate's degrees in academic and technical arenas along with short-term career certificates, Northeast students are well prepared whether they choose to transfer to a senior college or enter the workforce.

Adults know a bargain when they see one, and that is why our non-traditional population is growing by leaps and bounds. Whether beginning college for the first time, or coming back to get ready for another career, adult students feel right at home.

Research has shown that students who begin at community colleges often do much better academically than their peers who begin initially at senior colleges.

Northeast fields teams in football, men's and women's basketball, women's softball, golf, tennis and baseball. A wide variety of clubs and organizations along with intramural sports keep our students active as well.

Robert L. Gibson, who serves as associate dean of student services at Northeast and registrar, said, "Serving as registrar at Northeast, parents tell me all the time how
